CADENCE' 21

"To compete is human; to win, divine." This was one of the central rules to follow during a week-long event organized by the Cultural Council at IIITD. The competition among the houses was fierce for becoming the institute winners. The wide array of events, packed with energy provided by the clubs and CC, was helping keep the students engaged with the ongoing events. After finishing their Zoom lectures (probably even missing one or two of them), the students got ready for their next competition, formed teams, and planned on what events to take up.

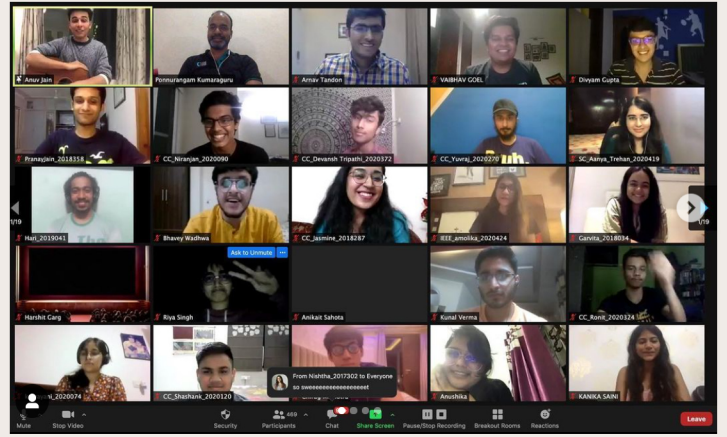

Winner

Orion came out to be the ultimate winner of the festival with 4500 points in their pocket, while Phoenix and Cepheus were yawning at 2nd and 3rd places, satisfied (probably not much) with their 2595 and 1874 points.

So let's have a small recap. The whole festival started on - you guessed it - Monday with FooBar kicking in the right at the beginning. The event was given the green light after a performance by the one and only Anuv Jain. Poker night, organized by the Sports Council, helped the students blow off "Monday steam." The packed schedule continued on like this right up until Sunday evening. A vivid Valorant competition, the exhilarating Fashion week by Muse, and the hilarious team events by Machaan completely utilized the resources available to enhance the experience of the festival even in online mode. The "cherry on the top of the cake" was the performance by Prashasti Singh.

Popular Sentiment

College has its own peaceful vibe which my words cannot describe...
With professors so patient and friends so cool
I'll surely keep away from the plagiarism rule...
with the interesting events in line
we can make our talent shine...
Although the deadlines are on rife
still no doubt livin' my best life...
I no more want to wait
Please open the hostel gate!!

The Inside Story

I would say the most important thing about improving in CP is practice. You don't need to spend hours just solving questions, but being consistent and persistent is the key. Make sure you're investing atleast half an hour to it everyday, irrespective of whatever quiz or exam you have the next day. And make sure if you're unable to solve a question, you read the editorial, solve it yourself and revisit the problem in a few weeks. That will be more effective than any resources you can find online. It's not something unattainable or scary. And you won't see yourself improving instantly. A lot of contests will go really well, a lot will go really badly. Don't be disheartened by any ups or downs you face. Just be regular with solving problems and giving contests. Practice makes perfect.
